Clyde Adams, or Adam Clyde, it isn't quite certain just which patrony-mic he ties to at the present time, was Newnham's selection, and, taking it by and large, did fairly well. Though eleven times the swatters hit where they weren't, hot until the fifth could they get enough together to do any particular damage. During that box three mighty wallops and a sacrifice counted thrice, which was quite enough for that ball game at least. In the sixth one more was added to the total on Beal's biff, Eibel's out and Broderick's drive to the right of Patsy Bohannon. Adam Clyde, or Clyde Adam, uncorked a wonderful wild heave in the seventh, which resulted in another egg in the cedar chest. The counting came to a close chest. Pertinent Comment

By GUS MALBERT.

Well, they're off on the first long tramp, meaning Newnham and his Rebs, of course. Nine long days we must be without the big fellows, but there will be some satisfaction in watching the progress made in the camp of the enemy. Reading is the camp of the enemy. Reading is the first to be tackled, and they have made great preparations for the reception of Newnham in President Witman's home town. The whole populace will in condition. Tom he garty autounces that he is home town. The whole populace will in condition. Tom has been worrying
